PARIS OFF-SEASON

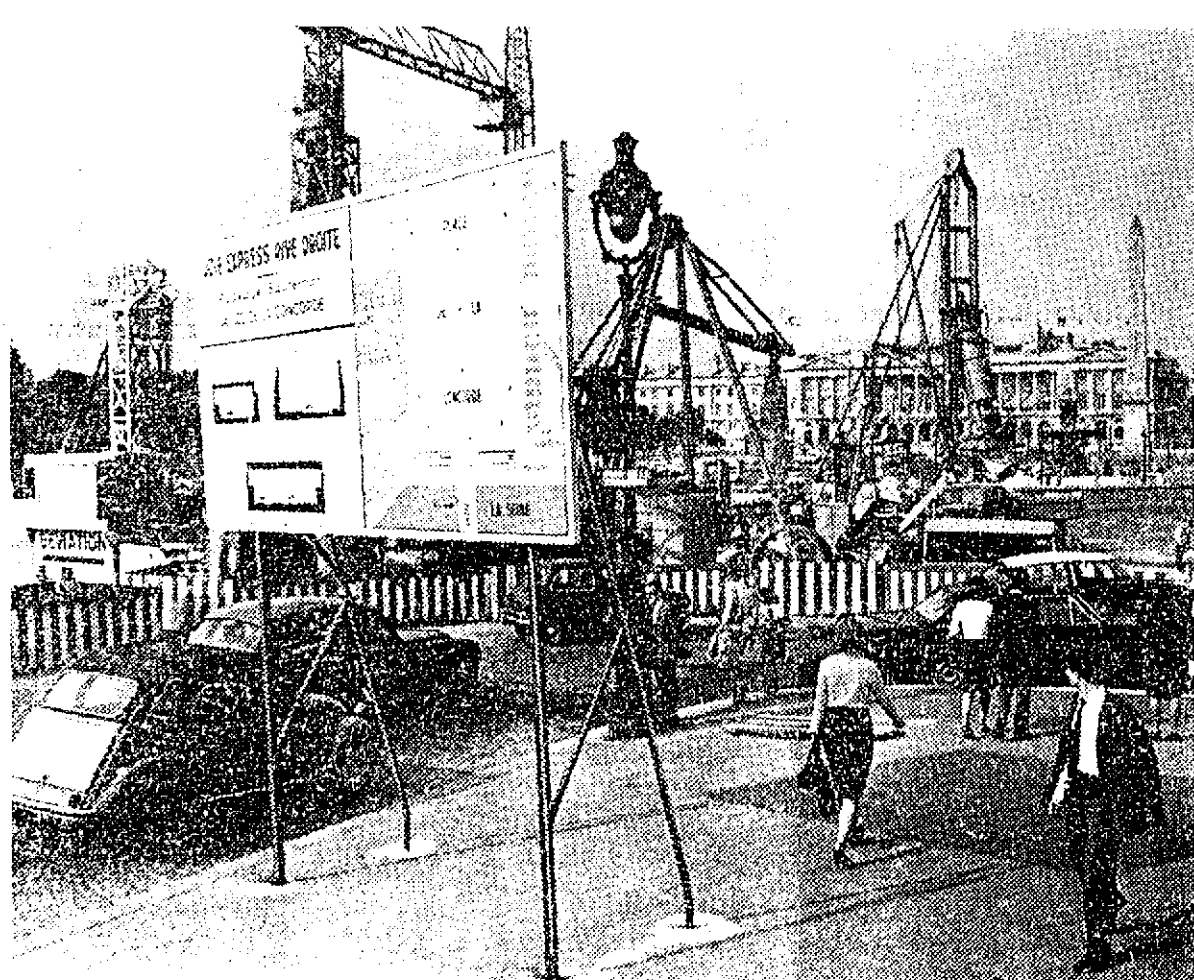

Paris during its busy season is filled with tourists, sometimes so many that all there is to see seems to be other tourists. In the off-season, on the other hand, the city empties out, relaxing with a sigh till spring brings new hordes of tourists.

But from late fall to early spring Paris is for Parisians, many of whom are unnoticed by tourists during the busy season. Or if not unnoticed they stand out more clearly against their natural backgrounds, uncluttered by swarms of camera-toting outsiders come to see and flee on a whirlwind tour.

A stroll through the French capital at such a time brings to light familiar and not-so-familiar sights that often are overlooked in a typical tourist's day. Then even the looks on lovers' faces take on new beauty, and the sight of an old accordionist becomes more touching.

A gypsy guitarist plays for pay in one of the picturesque bistros of northern Paris.

Construction causes congestion in Paris, too, as work proceeds near the Place de la Concorde on a new freeway along the banks of the Seine.

Lovers are a sight as old as Paris, and this carefree twosome enjoys the sun on a warm day. Like most beatniks, they are foreign, not French.

Proclaimed by their odd attire, beatniks on the banks of the Seine share a bottle.

A policeman directing traffic on the fashionable Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honore, near the Elysee Palace, seems to indulge in a ballet with fashion models in a giant poster.

Kennedy Film Is Sold to British TV

NEW YORK (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. has purchased a two-hour film challenging the work and findings of the Warren Commission on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Emil de Antonio, coproducer of the film, said Wednesday that BBC had paid $40,000 for the film, which he said was "the most money that has ever been paid for a film for a single transmission by anybody in the United Kingdom."

He said the telecast in Britain would be on Jan. 29 and theater showings would probably begin a few days earlier under separate negotiations.

The film, which cost $68,000 to produce, is called "Rush to Judgment," and takes its title from the book by Mark Lane, Lane, the other coproducer, interviews 18 persons in the film, which he describes as "a brief for the defense."

Distribution of the film in the United States is still being negotiated.

Television and Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — Television's biggest success story this season is "The Jackie Gleason Show," achieving new heights by the expedient of returning to a musical comedy format that delighted the home audience eight years ago.

Lyn Duddy, with his partner Jerry Bresler, is again turning out the music and lyrics for the "Honeymooners," expanded from 10 to more than 20 shows after the Nielsen ratings indicated audience approval of the reunion of Gleason and his longtime partner, Art Carney.

Duddy, in New York briefly, said the big production staff is working "nine days a week" on the shows taped in Miami.

"People love to see Jackie performing — more than playing host," he theorized. "And he's working harder than I've ever seen him work and apparently thrives on it. He's cheerful, enthusiastic — and available."

Gleason and Carney are not exactly professional singers, he admitted, although "Jackie has a tremendous ear for music" and Carney is a better-than-average bathroom tenor.

"But when you write music for them, you tailor-make it for their ranges," Duddy said. "That automatically knocks out certain things — we wouldn't do a song like 'Tenderly' for either of them because it involves too much range."

As Duddy and Bresler finish their songs, they put them on tapes — "You should hear Bresler do 'She'll Be Coming Home with Me' — and turn them over to the performers."

"I've seen Gleason learn a song from two playings," Duddy said. "Both he and Carney like to learn their songs by playing them over and over when they are around the house."

Mid-season cancellations of television series mounted to an unlikely 13 over the weekend.

Standards of Draft Again Lowered

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is lowering its draft standards again in order to obtain 40,000 more men for remeal military training.

The third revision of draft standards this year provides for rescreening of men now classified 1Y: fit for service only in time of declared war or national emergency.

The latest step is part of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's plan to draft and give special training to borderline cases in order to make them qualified for general military service.

The lowered standards announced Tuesday are still higher than those in effect during the Korean War.

About 2.4 million men now are classified 1Y.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

THEY LOVE YOU, THEY LOVE YOU NOT: Psychoanalysts have a big, fat, $25 word that gives the clue to how they feel about you—ambivalent or, translated, loving-hating. This is revealed in observations just released through Stanford University's Counseling and Testing Center by its director, Dr. John D. Black. He states: "The adult population over age 40 or so resents youth... confronted with the increasingly frequent and disconcerting reminders of the passing of time — of lost opportunities, of approaching obsolescence: the bifocals, tightening girdles, dentures, the painful glances at that unflattering bathroom mirror..."

Old adults, he says, kid themselves into believing that youth is a joyous, carefree play time—forgetting the "anxiety, doubts and fears, the loneliness" that are the badge of being young in any period. He concludes that the "generation gap," always present, is more dangerous than ever today—it's wide and full of tension... "both generations having their underlying anxieties, which make it easy for them to misperceive, envy and resent each other."

In a refreshing switch, he lays down "Ten Commandments for Parents Over 30"—rules for them to obey: 1. Don't sneeringly label youth's taste "junk." 2. Listen to young adults' music. 3. Read their books. 4. Ask questions—sensible ones—and listen to what youth has to answer. 5. Don't condemn all young people because of the acts of a few. 6. Realize impatience is natural to youth (frequently, to oldsters, too). 7. Stop criticizing trivial things with stereotyped reactions—long hair isn't necessarily dirty, bare feet don't make a bum. 8. Be careful not to dictate the decisions youth should make itself. 9. Don't threaten by withholding money. 10. Above all, create the feeling that home is a sanctuary, where youth—no matter how things are going—will be accepted, respected and loved. (Hey, maybe parents should read this column!)

YOUTH REVOLT HITS BRAZILIAN AIRWAVES: Youth's ferment is puzzling parents in Brazil, too—where in one short year, the musical mop-top, Roberto Carlos, has set the television wave-lengths jangling. He has become the pop singing idol of millions of restive young seniors and senioritas. He's 23 and features a Brazilian rhythm of rock 'n' roll on his big-time Saturday night show that showcases youth, singing and guitar playing. Roberto's known as a "good boy" and a smart businessman, with 85 factories turning out his "jalopy" jeans and shirts. There's no rumor yet of his touring America, but he's a symptom in Brazil of the same worldwide youth movement that looks to you and models itself on you. Half of the country's 85 million people are less than 20, and Roberto gives this half identity and an outlet... under circumstances where a strict government and parents sometimes arrest youths for offenses like growing hair covering their collars and sentence them—to the barber chair.

SOME FAB, FAV, TUFF, GROOVY, NEW ITEMS: Remember those summer painted knees? Don't throw away the cosmetic paints you dabbed on the designs with, girls—you can switch them, this winter, to coloring rouge-and-eye-shadow earrings right onto the lobes of your ears. Got an urge for a jiffy pin-up? Try burlap for a bulletin board... outfit named Hallman has just devised a novel version made of cartoon-decorated, stiff-mounted burlap that you slap against the wall and it sticks, to festoon with thumb-tacked-up reminders. Great mustache walkout ends—students who walked out of Grand Rapids, Mich., classes recently because of ban against furry upper lips, forsook the support of picketing parents and returned to school. Kilts kill girls in Paris—big new fashion rage is for a real kilt sewn in the Scottish Highlands (often worn with sweater—a la U.S. college girls' costumes of 20 years ago). Will European guys seize this chance to steal back their masculine garb from girls? No, because two yards of plaid kilt a girl cutely—while seven yards are needed for a guy!

Only those who have the patience to do simple things perfectly will acquire the skill to do difficult things easily. — Johann Schiller, German poet and dramatist.

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was mentioned in this place a fortnight ago that "Peyton Place" stars like Dorothy Malone, Ed Nelson and Mia Farrow seem to get involved in real-life dramas more exciting than those in the nighttime soap opera.

Now we have Christopher Connelly involved in the juvenile riots on the Sunset Strip.

Mind you, Chris was not a participant; he has neither the hair nor the inclination to join the shaggy protesters. But the Kansas-born actor is a keen observer of the youthful scene, figuring it helps his role as 18-year-old Norman Harrington.

"I try to study the jargon of the kids and their way of thinking," reasons Chris, who is 25. "If I use slang that is out of style, I can look pretty damn square to the young audience."

Connelly, who lives a few blocks from the Sunset Strip, was returning home from dropping off his date one Saturday evening when he saw the mob scene around Pandora's Box. That's the teen-age hangout at the eastern boundary of the strip and the hotbed of protests against "police brutality."

Police and sheriff's deputies claim they are only trying to enforce the 10 p.m. curfew for those under 18, thus avoiding the rioting that jams the strip each weekend.

"When I came on the scene that night," said Connelly, "there were several hundred kids milling around. Some of them had stopped a bus and were rocking it and breaking out the windows. Then they stopped another bus, and a few of them opened up the back and began tearing out the motor."

"Actually, there were only about 20 boys involved in the rioting. The rest stood on the curb and shouted encouragement; they seemed unwilling to join in."

The crowd suddenly submitted to police orders to clear the area, and the demonstration ended for that night. But they have continued each weekend, requiring heavy assignments of policemen.

"I think the best way to handle the situation is to make the parents come and claim the kids when they get in trouble," observed Connelly. "That's what the police have been doing, and it may help in getting the parents to pay more attention to their children. I believe the lack of attention is the source of all the trouble."

Joan Crosby's TV Notebook

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — In England, Rachel Roberts is such a well-known actress she doesn't have to be identified as Mrs. Rex Harrison.

Over here she does, but she doesn't mind.

"It's most understandable," she said, "and it doesn't bother me at all."

She was on a lunch break, nibbling on a piece of bread slathered with peanut butter ("last night I wanted a peanut butter sandwich, and I went all over New York and couldn't find one") and she was making do without a Bloody Mary because the only decent bar in the area turned out to be an all-male stronghold, McSorley's Old Ale House. Patrons set up a huc as we walked in, then applauded as we quickly turned and exited.

"Aren't they darling?" Rachel said.

She was in one of New York's seamier areas because that's where they were rehearsing the Hallmark Hall of Fame production of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" in which she appears with Rosemary Harris and Dirk Bogarde. It will be telecast on NBC-TV on Wednesday, Dec. 7.

Rachel is Welsh (born in Llanelly), lively, concerned, with short-cropped hair and doing justice to a miniskirt. She was nominated for an Oscar for her performance in "This Sporting Life" but is nevertheless not consumed with ambition.

"I enjoy acting, but I'm glad I'm not just an actress. I don't love it as much as some who can't be anything else. I would miss it if occasionally I didn't have a chance to do something like this. But this will satisfy me for months. I have a lot I wouldn't have had if I had been a school teacher in Wales. The theater itself has given me life—my husband, my friends, the chance to travel. That's what it has given me."

The Brave Rifles, commemorating the 22nd anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge, is "a documentary but not really," according to Laurence Mascott, the producer of the special to be seen on ABC Stage 67 on Dec. 14.

"I tried to depart from coldness and add emotion," the soft-spoken man said. "Ten times during the course of the show we freeze the action and we go into the minds of 10 men and translate what happened to them into the basic experiences of soldiers any time, anywhere."

"We examine how a soldier loses his sense of fear and gains courage, how he learns hatred of the enemy and compassion, what it feels like to be a young kid and a liberator, what it feels like to be wounded."

For the wounded soldier Mascott didn't have to look far. He used himself. A holder of a Purple Heart and five Battle Stars ("they are loser's medals," he says), Mascott was severely wounded in the Battle of the Bulge. His feelings after being wounded? "I was incredibly happy to be alive. I never saw the film shot of me that day until I was researching this show. Enough time had gone by so that I could view it dispassionately. As a producer, when I saw it I thought, 'This is good footage.'"

WHERE IT ALL STARTS—JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Dear Helen: I think they should stamp out junior high schools! Know where the wildness and smoking and drinking and stupid fads all start? Junior Hi!

If you don't believe me, just stand on a corner a couple of blocks from one of those adolescent factories when the kids get out of school. At least half of them light up their fags. Others make out shamelessly, the language they use would burn your ears! And I happen to know at least ten 13-year-olds that brag about getting drunk every weekend.

Many of these kids are the shop-lifters too.

I tell you, Helen, if you get through junior high school with a fairly clean record, you've got it made in high school. But many of us have to spend the first year of high school reforming.

Maybe it wouldn't help, but I think if they had grade schools that go to the eighth grade, and then four-year high schools, they'd at least split up some of the gangs. You lump them all together and they get big ideas, when they are nothing but punk kids.—DISGUSTED

Dear Dis: Oh, come on now, they're not THAT bad. But I'll admit, junior high schools aren't exactly filled with sweet little innocents. If trouble lies ahead, it usually starts right here, for ages 13—15 are the "trying" years.

I've often wondered how a four-schools divided into Low (through eighth grade) and High (through 12th). — H.

Dear Helen: I'm writing to answer "good girl" who believes she is missing all the fun by not dating wild boys.

I was one of the good girls—still am. The fellows often treated me as a pal. They would talk of their girls and even ask me for advice. That's why I say: those wild guys are the very fellows who despise the fast girls most.

I waited till my Senior year for my first date. Yes, I had plenty of offers from the wild guys, but the wait was worthwhile. I met and dated one of those "shy brains" you mentioned, Helen, meaning of the word dull, and the

Say "I'm Sorry"

...then bridle your tongue and have a reconciliation. How foolish, how petty, are attitudes which wreck affection and devotion. Hasty words, misunderstanding, false pride, do great harm. Have you been at odds with a friend, one you love, with anybody? That is a delicate and difficult situation. The wedding ceremony is not enough. Even love is inadequate. There must be mutual effort and determined purpose. By their very nature men and women are different. They never see eye-to-eye. But God gave us the institution of marriage and He will help break barriers which separate us when we seek His will. Then, marriage will succeed and each will be proud of the other just because you are so different. A forgiving spirit and a love gift will symbolize your penitence...go to church together. It will help you to say, "I'm Sorry."

Seek Ye First The Kingdom of God
And His Righteousness;
And All These Things Shall Be Added Unto You.

You Can Do This Best Through Regular Worship At Church. Our Ministers and These Sponsoring Firms Urge You To Attend Your Church Regularly.

Find yourself through FAITH in GOD...man's ONLY HOPE
Both your FAITH and your CHURCH GROW through REGULAR ATTENDANCE

Packers Get Scent of Super Bowl

By DICK COUCH
The Green Bay Packers, beginning to sniff the bonanza that awaits the survivor of pro football's 1966 power struggle, can break through the first major barrier Sunday on their way to the Super Bowl.

Green Bay, the defending National Football League champion, needs a victory over San Francisco to nail at least a share of the Western Conference title. If the Packers get past the 49ers and Baltimore bows to Chicago, they'll win the West outright and move into line for a possible January jackpot of $23,000 per man.

With winners' shares in the NFL championship game expected to hit $8,000 and the winning team in the Super Bowl playoff between NFL and American Football League kings guaranteed $15,000 per player, the total payoff could double the previous record for a team.

Should the Packers, solid favorites to average a 21-20 loss to San Francisco earlier in the season, win their 10th game in 12 starts, they'll turn their attention to the Bears-Colts game at Baltimore and the Eastern Division showdown at Dallas between the Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals.

The Colts, who have dropped two in a row for a 7-4 mark, must win to stay alive. They play the Packers next Saturday at Baltimore.

A Dallas victory over the Cards would break their 8-2-1 stalemate in the East and give the Cowboys the inside track to their first division crown.

With the Eastern champion slated to play host in the title game, Dallas' 75,000-seat Cotton Bowl, sold out for Sunday's battle, would virtually assure an $8,000-plus cut for the NFL king.

Cleveland, still in the running in the East with a 7-4 record, entertains New York while Los Angeles, barely alive at 7-5 in the West, meets Detroit. Pittsburgh visits Philadelphia and Atlanta is at Minnesota at other Sunday action.

Despite their fourth-place standing, the 49ers, who have won six of their last eight, still envision a gold strike in the West. However, even if they ambush the Packers, it will take two more victories and put them over.

Gale Sayers, running with abandon again, leads the Bears into Baltimore, where Johnny Unitas, troubled by a sore right arm, tries to bounce back against Chicago's strong pass rush.

Dallas sends the league's most potent offensive machine, Charley Find, to the Super Bowl.

Charley Finds Football Success

ST. LOUIS — (NEA) — The problems of having a name like Charley Winner are not so bad when you've got a father-in-law named Weeb Ewbank.

Winner has somebody in the family who understands.

For example, the names Charley Winner and Weeb Ewbank lend themselves to spoonerisms. People get flustered sometimes and out comes Warley Chinner and Ewby Weebank.

"See," Charley said, "it happens to the best of them." President Hubert Heever also had the problem.

Then there's the size situation.

Ewbank and Winner, head coaches of the New York Jets and the St. Louis Cardinals, are 5-foot-6 leaders who occasionally must chew out huge football players — eyeball to eyeball.

"Really," said Winner, "it's only a problem if you let it become a problem. Sometimes the press gets a little carried away with my name, once in awhile my size."

But during the season I'm so busy getting ready for the next Sunday I don't have time to worry about my ego.

If the players think it's funny, that's their business. I think I've got their respect as a football man. So when it comes time to get down to business they know what to do."

In the off season, the Ewbanks and the Winners get to

Outdoor Notebook

PETERSBURG, Alaska — The brackish water of upper Wrangle Straits spun back from the prow, slapped against the tiny window and instantly froze there so that the great breadth of Alaska became a blur of lights and darks.

Inside the small cabin the three visiting hunters huddled close to their coffee and discussed goose and duck shooting with Jim Brooks, director of game for the 49th state.

Yes, Brooks was saying, Alaska honkers and mallards are the biggest in the world; some of the honkers weigh over 15 pounds and a few of the mallards run to five pounds.

"Many of the geese do their breeding in Siberia and fly south over the Alaskan coast and down to Mexico," he said. "But the ones you'll shoot today are all resident birds." He smiled and added, "They like it here."

"In other words they're not tourists like ourselves," said Pete Kuhlhoff, gun editor for Argosy magazine.

"Nobody stops being a tourist in Alaska," countered Mr. Brooks and, with a faint Texas-type drawl, he added, "This state's too big!"

After a two-hour voyage, the little boat drew up to a lonely, pine-skirted point and the anchor was lowered. The hunters were distributed on four promontories via an outboard powered craft that had been towed from Petersburg, 20 miles distant.

This hunter deposited himself against a large boulder sitting in the center of a frozen bog, laid his Winchester Model 1400 shotgun across his knees and waited for the geese.

Nearly an hour passed before the plaintive, honking sounds of the great birds came bending over the endless green swells. Then a thin, black line appeared, fluttering toward the bog.

The hunter froze. His thumb flexed against the safety button. His eyes fixed on the birds. "Come on you beautiful, free things," he prayed. "Come closer so that your masked faces stand out clear against the sky, so that your giant wings can be heard beating against the air — so that I can pick one of you out and . . ."

The birds kept coming toward the bog, losing altitude like the big jets, all the time honking and yapping to one another as though they were being "talked in" by some phantom control tower.

Then they were over the bog, wheeling over the hunter who hoped, in his brown full-length rubber slicker, that he looked like a part of the boulder. They numbered at least 500, casting weird shadows on the bog as they prepared to settle onto the mud.

The hunter picked out one of the leaders, rose to his feet, pushed the safety button, swung his gun and slapped the trigger. The target dropped out of the sky but, before it hit the ground, the hunter was leveling in on another bird.

The second shot never sounded.

The man lowered his gun and stood, watching the horde lift back up to cruising altitude and disappear into the south.

tal preparedness is so important in this game. You just can't afford to let anything sidetrack you."

Winner is obviously a man in love with his job. "He thinks of everything," said St. Louis halfback Bill Triplett. When interviews with reporters end, Charley Winner even thanks them for stopping by.

"I've learned an awful lot from Weeb about this game," Charley said. "I have much to thank him for. It was a great break to work for him at Baltimore. No question that it helped get me where I am today."

Now the Cardinals, who are in trouble because regular quarterback Charley Johnson is out with a leg injury, cling to a slim lead in the NFL's Eastern Division. They still must face Dallas and Cleveland in two of their last four games.

Odds are that St. Louis has a far better shot at getting into the first Super Bowl game than does New York and Winner's father-in-law.

As one reporter put it: "Charley, in your first season as a pro coach it looks as though your name has taken on a special significance."

An Austrian Steals Boating Thunder

By DAVE BURGIN

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. — (NEA) — Dieter Schulze will be back in Attang, Austria, soon to be welcomed as the new world champion of single engine outboard motorboat racing.

In this country, his championship will mean nothing more than a few paragraphs in the boating magazines, perhaps a feature story and a photograph.

To Dieter Schulze it is an incredible thing.

"Can you imagine?" he said, in German-Austrian accented English, "can you imagine such an unbelievable thing? The Americans do everything so well and I am the winner."

Competitive outboard motorboating in the United States is, in some ways, an unbelievable thing.

It does not get much space on the nation's sports pages because it is generally considered to be a hobby, something to do on Sunday afternoon, but not a sport.

"Water sports in general get fair coverage," said Mel Zikes, a former West Coast sports writer and competition outboard driver, "but outboard racing is a solid sport, a scientific sport, and it's getting to be just as competitive as the Indianapolis 500."

"A major sports car race might be a better analogy. You have several different classes running at one time — single engines with small displacement, two engines, three engines, plus the different hull concepts."

"You can contrast the speeds of the fast boats against the slower ones, at the same time watch the competition among boats of the same class."

Lake Havasu City has been the site of the world outboard championship for the past three years, and probably will continue to be its home until (and if) outboard racing reaches such dimensions that other areas demand the chance to stage it.

The lake was formed by the building of Parker Dam on the Lower Colorado River between Arizona and California. The city is only three years old and is being developed by the McCulloch Corp., which, not incidentally, happens to produce outboard motors.

So far as the six-hour world championship endurance race is concerned the competition is completely open. Chrysler, Evinrude, Johnson and Mercury engines are well-represented, often in factory teams. This year's race attracted more than 125 top drivers, including Schulze and drivers from three other foreign countries.

"In Europe," said Schulze, "outboard racing is very popular. I have won eight European championships, mainly because I have been fortunate enough to make trips to America to study American technique."

"The Americans are far advanced. In Europe, we use some West German and some Swedish engines, but mostly they are American. So are hull designs."

Schulze won in his class by driving a steady race, never pushing too hard, always playing for position and hoping for faster boats to play themselves out. "They did."

"For some reason," said Mel Zikes, "the big unlimited inboard hydroplanes (Miss Bardahl, Tahoe Miss, etc.) get most of the notice in Americans."

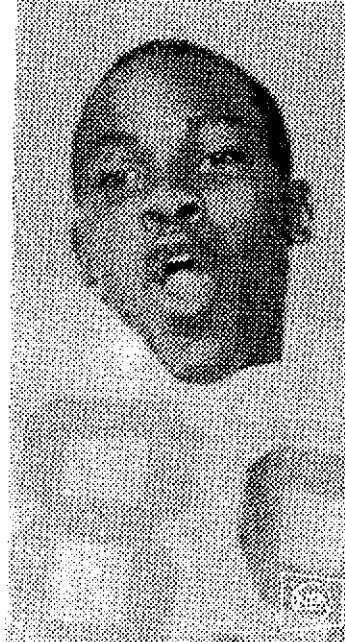

"It will be several years before another country can produce a basketball player who is better than the best American player."

Cohen-Mintz plays the pivot on the Israeli team. He stands 6-8½, shoots well with either hand but enjoys the game most when he grabs a defensive rebound and quickly flips a pass that begins a good fast break.

But Cohen-Mintz indeed is a player of international stature, and thus likes to talk about the basketball gap.

"Five or six years ago," he said, "there was no individual phase of the game which a foreign (non-American) player could compare to the average American college player."

"The American could shoot better, had a bigger variety of shots, handled the ball better

The Greatest? Not Really

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The world's greatest basketball center showered and dressed hurriedly because he wanted to get a good seat to see Walt Bellamy of the New York Knicks play.

The "world's greatest basketball center" is Tanchum Cohen-Mintz.

Or so he is billed in Israel, his country, and in Europe.

"Do not worry about it," Cohen-Mintz said, "I am only called that when we are playing a team that does not have

DIETER SCHULZE of Attang, Austria, races outboard boats in the United States because, he says, it helps him win in Europe. The American technique is very successful in outboard racing in Europe.

Between You'n' Me

KANSAS CITY Mo. — (NEA) — Because Lloyd Wells surmised the best way to a man is through his girl friend Otis Taylor belongs to the Kansas City Chiefs.

And largely because Otis, a sophomore flanker, belongs to the Chiefs they are the new jet-propelled champions of the Western Division of the American Football League.

"The difference in us," said coach Hank Stram, "is that we're able to travel much faster. In the past it was like taking a bus. Now it's like taking a jet—mainly because of the great ability of our flanker, Otis Taylor." Stram also mentioned Mike Garrett and Bert Coan, his running backs, and a rejuvenated Lenny Dawson to throw the ball.

But Taylor, playing his second year as a pro, is the big difference since he's challenging George Sauer of New York, another sophomore, for receiving honors with 54 catches in 12 games and a total yardage of 1,194, by far the best in the AFL.

Lloyd Wells, a scout for the Chiefs who specializes in signing men from the southern Negro schools, can take a piece of the credit. Two years ago at this time Wells was in Dallas on a manhunt. Objective: Otis Taylor. In those days, son, the leagues were still at war and Taylor was in the clutches of the enemy, the baby sitters of the NFL. They had him hidden out at a suburban motel in Richardson, Tex.

"I must have tried a dozen places," said Wells, "and couldn't find him for three days. I called Jack Steadman, our general manager, and told him it was useless and I might as well go home. He said, 'Stay.' Then I got to thinking—they got this boy in a strange town, they got to entertain him with girls so I called Prairie View College, where Otis went to school, and asked did he know any girls from Dallas and they gave me the names of three he'd been seen on campus with. I got down to the third before she said, 'Yes I've seen him but I'm not supposed to tell you.'"

"So I called Otis' mother in Houston and she called the girl, who told us it was the Continental motel."

Then Lloyd, posing as a newspaperman, visited Taylor and Seth Cartwright, another Prairie View player who later signed with the New York Jets. "Come on," said Wells to Otis, "let's get out of here."

"They're watching me," said Otis.

"Listen, your mother says to come with me. You call me when you're ready," said Wells.

A Dallas Cowboy agent had spotted Wells and threatened to arrest him for trespassing, so at three in the morning he sneaked back into the motel through the pool, climbed the fence and Cartwright's girl friend opened the glass doors facing the terrace-patio. They went out the way he came in, to the airport in Fort Worth since Wells figured they'd have the Dallas airport staked out.

By the time the Philadelphia Eagles drafted him on the NFL's 13th round Taylor was signed to a Kansas City contract.

When Wells mentioned Taylor's mother he had pulled the big switch. "I'm kind of the baby," admitted Otis. "I have a big sister and it seems I always do my best when my mother watches me play. I had my first big day in Houston last year when Frank Jackson was hurt and I got to start. She lives there."

Jackson, the regular flanker, was also the starter for the AFL All-Stars last year but in the expansion draft the Chiefs made him available to Miami because they had Taylor. Was it a gamble?

"No," answered coach Stram. "You have to see Taylor every day to realize how great he is. He's 6-3, weighs 215, has terrific speed and moves. He's also a very, very tough guy. He'll hit people and he's convinced he's the best."

"I don't think I've had a big day yet," shrugged Otis, who had 178 yards gained in one game this year.

And what would an all-out big day be?

"Oh, if I caught 15 passes and scored maybe three or four touchdowns."

Of course, mama would have to be there, too.

Cohen-Mintz

and generally played the game with more finesse.

"Now basketball is growing so much abroad that the individual difference is narrowing. In my country basketball is second only to soccer in popularity. We have 1,200 courts. And, of course, the only technique is American."

"But there is still a vast difference in the team game, which is why American teams in international competition usually win easily."

"We do not have the coaches. Good coaching, like the individual player, takes time to develop. In Europe, in Asia, in Israel, we run the basic offense and practice the basic defense. Americans are much more sophisticated and have little trouble coping with them."

"In 10 years, the Olympics will not be so easy for you."

Overseas, basketball and the University of Kentucky are synonymous. So it was that Cohen-Mintz had a "fantastic, beautiful feeling" when Israel played touring Kentucky in Tel Aviv in August.

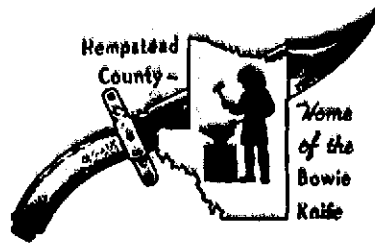

Cohen-Mintz scored 33 points, grabbed 33 rebounds and the Israelis beat Kentucky, 81-76, using a fast break and patterned offense which must have reminded Adolph Rupp of his own teachings.

At 27, Cohen-Mintz says he will only play a couple of more years.

Java is one of the world's most densely populated areas. It has two-thirds of the Republic of Indonesia's 92 million people.

Deserves To Be Framed—

TAKE IT from a scarred member of the profession, it takes a tough-minded person with an inch thick to stick with the newspaper business. Newspapers are controversial by their very nature because they are a reflection of our community and our society; because they publish all kind of news, good and bad; because they editorialize; because they sometimes step on toes in the process of covering news developments or expressing an opinion.

As a result, the reportorial and editorial staffs are constant targets of critical barbs, complaints, accusations and blasts. We often catch the blame for persons who give us erroneous or untrue news. Not long ago a network television executive said in a magazine article that the American public has become extremely sensitive and is likely to take offense at most anything published in newspapers or presented on television.

He is so very right! At any rate, it's sweet music to our ears to receive—in the midst of harangues—a compilation of spirits. See below: Not only newspaper folks also have feelings, just like humans, underneath their battered skin.

A well-respected Batesville woman sent us a nice letter yesterday, and we're tempted to frame it for posterity or something. Since it does something for our egotism, we decided to publish a couple of excerpts with the idea that some day, when discouragement weighs heavily, we can turn back in the files and read the good words for a revitalizing occasionally. Believe it or not, I still want to tell you that I think you put out a most creditable paper, and we enjoy and appreciate it. I doubt that many papers are the size of ours have daily papers comparable to ours.

"We like the many interesting pictures and other items, and we look forward to reading your two pages. Worth which we think is really worth more than that."—Tul Buchanan in Batesville

Says Situation at Girl's School Exaggerated

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The superintendent of the state girls' Training School said Thursday that legislative complaints of mistreatment of the institution's inmates were exaggerated, including the report of a beating of a mentally retarded girl.

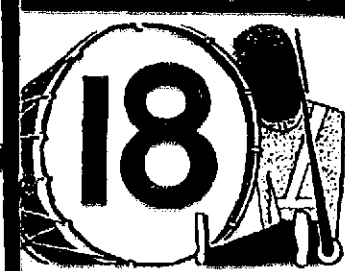

Supt. Clifton Shepherd said a 6-year-old girl who was mentally deficient to a mild degree was whipped with a switch by a matron last March, but that wasn't as bad as five members of the 1967 legislature made it sound.

The five opened the controversy Wednesday when Gov. Orval Faubus announced that he had received a report from them about conditions they found when they paid a surprise visit to the school at Alexander Nov. 23.

The five told a news conference Thursday that the girls were beaten until their legs were too good for ironing as many others as other inmates. They said it hadn't been determined that was used to administer the punishment.

"My investigation has determined that her punishment was a whipping to no greater degree than would be administered to a child who has not followed the instructions of her parents," Shepherd told a news conference.

Leaders Meet on Situation in Rhodesia

By RONALD THOMSON
LONDON (AP) — On a British warship steaming through heavy seas in the Strait of Gibraltar, Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Rhodesia's Ian Smith met today for a last desperate attempt to agree on ending the white Rhodesians' rebellion against eventual African rule.

Associates of Wilson reported that he was pessimistic about the outcome.

The two leading antagonists in the 13-month-old rebellion that threatens to tear the commonwealth apart went aboard the cruiser Tiger during the night as she lay at anchor in the rain-lashed Bay of Algeiras west of Gibraltar.

This morning the Tiger moved out into the rain-swept strait between Africa and Europe, reportedly bound either toward the Mediterranean island of Malta, 990 miles to the east, or toward Madeira, in the Atlantic 600 miles from Gibraltar.

Wilson and a team of top advisers flew to Gibraltar Thursday night after promising he would never surrender British principles.

He told the House of Commons that Britain and Rhodesia "are within hailing distance of a possible settlement" but cautioned that "there is still a considerable gap to bridge."

Smith arrived after midnight after a flight from Salisbury that took him around the bulge of Africa to avoid passing over black African countries opposed to his white-settler regime.

The rebel prime minister was accompanied by Gov. Sir Humphrey Gibbs and Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle, two Rhodesians who have remained loyal to Queen Elizabeth II.

A government spokesman in London said Wilson "had a short welcoming chat" with Smith before the two men retired for the night.

Their talks are likely to last only a few days. Wilson wants to be back in London on Sunday, ready to report to Parliament the next day.

Found Solution to His Problem

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Thomas Lotta, an artist, said he found a solution for one problem of painting watercolor pictures in freezing weather. "The water was turning to ice on my palette," he said. "I happened to have this bottle of whisky, so I used it. It worked fine."

Priest Gets Pleasure Hunting

WILLOWS, Calif. (AP) — The pheasant-hunting priest told his doctors, "If I had only six months left, I wanted to spend them with a gun in my hand."

That was some 20 years ago, after physicians told the Rev. John McGoldrick he might live only half a year longer because of heart trouble.

Today, Father McGoldrick, at age 63, is the active, avid hunter he always was. His formation of the unique Willows Pheasant Association has earned him the nickname The Pheasant Priest and the appreciation of fellow sportsmen, farmers and parishioners.

Farmer-sportsman relations were tense when Father McGoldrick, a native of Ireland, moved to Willows, a northern California town of 4,500 population 60 miles north of Sacramento, 17 years ago.

The following year he formed the Pheasant Association, which charges its maximum 1,000 members $10 a year each.

Then, in his Irish brogue, he went about convincing farmers they should permit association hunters on their lands to pursue pheasants. The association promised to pay for any damage caused by members.

Members now have roughly 47,000 acres of farmland, in the heart of the Sacramento Valley rice country, over which to roam.

About one third of the association's income goes to buy 1,000 rooster pheasants released in the area each year. What's left after expenses, about $5,000 a year, goes to the building fund of St. Monica's Roman Catholic Church, of which Father McGoldrick is pastor.

Cuba to Issue Special Stamps

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Havana radio says the Cuban government is issuing postage stamps titled "Genocide over Viet Nam."

To and From Airport Time Big Problem

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A transportation expert warned today that U.S. airlines may lose 70 per cent of their passengers unless something is done soon to reduce the time needed to get to and from airports.

Benton H. Elliott of the General Electric Co. said a survey of routes between New York and six of the nation's largest cities showed that air travel time had decreased an average of 50 per cent since 1948.

But, he said, the passenger hasn't saved much time because the ground travel time between airport and downtown has increased by the same percentage due to congested roads.

The cities are Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Washington and Miami. In a paper presented at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, Elliott said the downtown portion of a trip between downtown Boston and Manhattan's East Side takes twice as long as the flight.

Food Price Drop Not Likely Soon

By BEN F. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new chairman of the House Agriculture Committee says there is no likelihood of any immediate drop in food prices but this situation may ultimately work out better for the housewife.

"In the long run, the prices of food depend on supply, and supply depends on whether the farmer gets a reasonable return for his work," says W.R. (Bob) Poage, who hails from the cotton and farming area of central Texas.

As ranking Democrat on the committee, he steps in next January to the chairmanship long held by Rep. Harold D. Cooley of North Carolina. Cooley was defeated for re-election Nov. 8.

Poage reasons this way: "If prices of food products are maintained at a reasonable, stable level, the farmer will step up production, and in that way, a price satisfactory to the farmer and reasonable to the consumer is maintained."

"If the price the farmer receives is too low, he will cut down on production, and a serious shortage may result, bringing skyrocketing prices. Then the consumer really gets hurt."

U.S. farmers, he told an interviewer, do a masterful job of keeping the country supplied with food, and also add to the nation's economy by producing for export. But only about a third of the price the consumer pays reaches the farmer, he says. The rest goes to processors, distributors and retailers, and for handling expenses and incidental costs such as fancy packaging.

Organized Crime Is Biggest Business But Few Know About It

By MARY ANITA LASETER
STAR FEATURE WRITER

The November 22 issue of "Awake" which is published by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N. Y., succeeded in living up to its name with its lead article on organized crime in the United States.

Based on an NBC TV program seen last August 25, the expose began by stating that organized crime in the United States "is bigger than all the automobile companies put together. It is so powerful that the Senate Committee which investigated it said that 'it may be described as a private government.' But despite its size, its wealth and its power, most Americans know very little about organized crime. Some even doubt its existence."

But the fact is, it not only exists but it abounds to a startling degree. On an average day the dollar value of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange is $300 million. On that same day organized crime will do about the same amount of business. To design, develop, build and test a 2,000 mile-an-hour B70 bomber cost the U.S. Defense Department one and one-half billion dollars over a period of nine years. The illegal sale of narcotics takes that much out of addicts' pockets in one year.

What do you think is the biggest single business in the U.S.A.? Not steel, not oil, not even AT & T. The biggest business is illegal gambling. We aren't speaking now of horse racing, dog racing, or the slot machines and dice games at Las Vegas. They are legalized milking of the public's pocketbook and amount to several billion dollars. Yet, hard as it is for many to realize, Americans gambled many times that much illegally in 1966. A sheriff in Florida said that illegal gambling exists because society wants it. Looks like that's true.

The rise of lawlessness throughout our country is blamed on Public Attitude. Chicago Police Superintendent Orlando W. Wilson said, "There is not only lack of respect for police authority, but for all out institutions — our courts, the church, parents, the home . . . People today simply seem insistent on being above authority." Perhaps the actions of some with "authority" have diminished the respect for others. For instance, organized crime pays more money to the police to look the other way than the American taxpayer pays to the police to do their job.

"What can be done?" the average citizen wants to know. "What kind of protection can a local merchant have against crime?" many asked after a recent news story regarding shoplifting. To discuss this problem which arises most often during the joyous season of Christmas, a group of merchants met during the last week. We know what they talked about, but we don't know what method they decided upon to remedy the situation. After all, crooks read newspapers, too, and we don't want to open any more doors to them, so it's just as well we can't reveal any local plan of action.

Orbiter 2's Moon Photos Excellent

WASHINGTON (AP) — A forbidding sweep of jagged rocks trusting from barren wasteland against a backdrop of glowering mountains appears in the first close-up photographs of the moon crater Copernicus.

It is not a spot where American astronauts, moon-bound by the end of this decade, would land by choice.

The strikingly clear pictures came from Lunar Orbiter 2, circling the planet on a scouting mission for that project. They were made Nov. 23 as the spacecraft sped 28½ miles above the lunar surface and 150 miles south of the crater.

Stored aboard the Orbiter, they were transmitted to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's deep space network at Goldstone, Calif., on command last Monday when the moon, sun and receiving station were in favorable position.

The pictures show mountains rising 1,000 feet from the flat floor of the crater, at slopes up to 30 degrees. To the north they outline against the horizon the 3,000-foot-high Gay-Lussac promontory of the Carpathian Mountains.

Later Philip Wien, investigating counsel, told the inquiry tribunal the pile of mine debris that was the source of the disaster had slipped again but that danger of a new tragedy apparently was being averted.

Bentonville Plant Contract

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Bishop Co. of Appleton Wis., and Bentonville, Ark., received a $457,907 contract Thursday from the Ozark Electric Co-operative Corp. to build 14½ miles of transmission lines from Tonitown to the Zion community in Washington County.

Seeks More Punishment for Shoplifter

The following letter is a copy of one written to Prosecuting Attorney John Goodson by City Attorney James H. Pilkinton in regard to Melba Muldrow, charged here earlier this week with shoplifting. The letter follows:

"I am writing to you in my capacity as City Attorney of the City of Hope, and desire to refer to you for investigation, and prosecution, a felony case against the above party which has come to the attention of the Hope Police Department."

"Melba Muldrow was caught shop-lifting in Hope on November 28th, with a 'take' on that date from several stores of less than $35.00 from each. We also made a shop-lifting case against her for 'takes' on November 26, the Saturday before, for amounts less than $35.00. Those particular cases were tried in Hope Municipal Court on last Tuesday, and sentence passed on those cases only."

"In the course of the investigation of the two cases mentioned above, the police uncovered more than $1,000.00 worth of other merchandise that this person had taken from stores at Hope and Prescott over a period of years and at various times. In most instances, she would take less than $35.00 worth at a time; however, on one occasion last summer, when in Hope, she stole a watch from the Rephan's Department Store valued at $50.00. As I understand it, she admits to this offense which, of course, is a felony and this is the case I am referring to your office."

"Some of the Merchants in Hope and Prescott feel very strongly about this matter, and want this defendant sent to the pen. Of course, as you know, my office and the city police cannot prosecute her on a felony charge, or for offenses which happened at Prescott. I have promised the Chief of Police here, and some of the local business men that I could call this matter to the attention of your office."

Blackwell Named to Commission

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov.-elect Winthrop Rockefeller announced Friday that he would appoint former state Sen. Lawrence Blackwell of Pine Bluff to the Arkansas Highway Commission, a choice he said was symbolic of the spirit of the Mack-Blackwell Amendment.

Rockefeller said Blackwell would succeed Wayne Hampton of Stuttgart, the commission chairman whose 10-year term expires in January.

The governor-elect told news conference that the appointment was in line with his pledge to choose the best persons he could for administrative positions.

Blackwell's name is linked with one of the most prominent pieces of legislation in the state in the last 20 years—the Mack-Blackwell Amendment, which was designed to take control of the Highway Department out of the governor's office.

Blackwell was a co-author of the amendment, which was adopted in 1952. Later, he served 33 months on the Highway Commission by appointment of Gov. Orval Faubus, filling the unexpired term of Cecil Lynch, who died in 1958. Blackwell served from 1947 through 1955 in the state Senate.

"I feel highly complimented and appreciate the confidence Mr. Rockefeller has indicated he has in me," Blackwell said. "I do have more than just a passing interest in our highway affairs."

Blackwell declined comment on charges against the highway department leveled during the campaign.

Rockefeller has been at odds with the Highway Commission since his general election campaign against Jim Johnson. He once said he would fire the "whole blankety-blank" commission and later said he would force the resignations of the commissioners.

He hinted again Friday that he had information that would make some of the commissioners want to resign if the information were correct. He said, however, that his commission and later said he would force the resignation of the entire commission was a "frivolity" that newsmen too too seriously.

Rockefeller's appearance at the news conference was his first since returning to the state Thursday. He had been vacationing in Florida after sacking a severe cold that had bothered him since shortly after the Nov. 8 election.

On other subjects, Rockefeller said he would meet with some Legislative Council members Sunday to discuss budget matters. The council offered earlier this week to lend him assistance.

He repeated that he would have his budget recommendations ready Dec. 12.

Rockefeller also said he still hoped to provide teachers with a $500 annual salary increase in each of the next two years, although the Education Department "is real tricky."

Asked if he would appoint any Negroes to top-level jobs, the governor-elect replied: "I will make appointments on the basis of merit. I have no attitude for or against hiring them."

He said that at the moment budget problems were the most pressing. He said he didn't know when he would announce another appointment.

Phil DelVecchio Dies Friday

Phillip DelVecchio, 45, maintenance supervisor for W. Shanhouse and Sons, Inc., died late yesterday in a Little Rock hospital. He had lived in Hope for over 20 years.

Arrangements are incomplete and will be announced by Oakcrest Funeral Home.

Heads National Education Group
